(the descendant of a French Protestant nobleman), after bequeathing a large fortune to each member of his family, devised landed estates of the annual value of £4,300 and personal property to the amount of £600,000 to Trustees for the purpose of accumulation during the lives of his three sons and of all their sons who should be living at the time of his death, or should be born in due course afterwards; the accumulated fund then to be expended in the purchase of estates and to be divided between the eldest male descendants of his three sons, with the benefit of survivorship; his will was confirmed by the House of Lords, but an Act of Parliament was subsequently passed to interdict in future any accumulation of property, so devised beyond 21 years after the death of a testator (The estates were divided between the 5th Baron and Charles Sabine Augustus, el. grandson of Charles, and son of Peter).
